NHSE KSS Primary Care School Interprofessional Leadership Fellowship

Following the success of three cohorts, NHSE KSS Primary Care Department is pleased to announce a fourth cohort of the Interprofessional Educational Leadership Fellowship programme.

The Fellowship programme aims to deliver benefits to Fellows, patients, local health systems and the wider NHS through upskilling individuals across the spectrum of leadership, and education, as well as offering a route into portfolio working and there by boosting workforce retention.

Through this PCS Interprofessional Leadership Programme, fellows will work with or in PCNs to develop:

- As medical education leaders
- New and innovative approaches for sustainable organisational development in PCNs e.g., Community education facilitation principles and associated education and workforce lead roles
- Ways to use practice skills and educator roles outside of the traditional practice boundaries to innovate and increase placement experiences and capacity
- New knowledge, skills, and competences as educators, in critical appraisal, leadership, simulation, and the use of quality improvement techniques
- An increased understanding of system leadership through education and training

These fellowships are aimed at GPs involved in the planning, delivery, or leadership of GP training expansion within general practice, in particular:

1. Educators with an understanding of the GP training pathway or a PGCert in education to support GP training expansion effectively.
2. GP Innovators passionate in developing or implementing new models for expanding GP training capacity in practices.
3. ICB and INT GP clinical leads who want to integrate GP training needs into local workforce development plans.

Benefits

Benefits to Primary Care Organisation

The scheme offers the opportunity to recruit talented and motivated healthcare professionals as well as retain and refresh those who are further in their careers and interested in developing professionally.

They may be the system leaders of the future both within GP practices, across Primary Care Networks and across traditional organisational boundaries.

Participants learning supports current PCN contractual requirements.

What support is there for Fellows?

Each Fellow will be supported by a mentor
- In addition to support as part of the academic programme and as well as a bespoke series of master classes.

A dedicated community of practice will be available to the cohort of fellows.

Our Values and Purpose

We believe that education is the foundation of transformation, whether that be through personal actualisation, the growth of those we sit alongside, or through service development. Our experience is that being an educator and leading through education creates resilience and flourishing. We want to share this experience with you so that you may excel in our wake.

(SE Primary Care Schools, 2022)

Unprecedented Primary Care transformation to address health and social care challenges in an aging society with high expectations and global challenges; complex and complicated.

It needs to be right - Clinical service delivery requires the right workforce, in the right place, at the right time.

Workforce is key - Workforce can no longer be an after thought so we require the expertise of those who teach, train, and support to sit alongside clinical service leaders as workforce educational leaders, and the Primary care infrastructure that values and enables these functions and people.

Leading across boundaries - For an integrated service we must work across all professional boundaries through systems-working, collaborative co-construction, and inter-professional learning, informed by those who deliver front line.
